What is HTML Fundamentals

HTML, the foundation of every web page. It is designed to be the standard markup language for documents to be displayed in browsers. This means that if you are a beginning web developer, HTML is the place to start! In approximately 3 half days, you will learn about the document object model, several types of HTML elements and the so-called DevTools our browsers offer to debug any webpage available. We will also dive into HTML by iteratively building our own webpage throughout the course.

Subjects:

- Create our first HTML Page and learn to debug it via the DevTools Inspector
- Get to know our first set of main HTML elements like Headers, Lists, Sections, Links, and Images
- Get to know the second batch of HTML elements like Tables and Forms

After this comprehensive first look at HTML, and therefore web development, you will go home with knowledge on how every webpage its skeleton is built up, and you will be comfortable working with HTML.

Who should attend HTML Fundamentals

Beginning web developers who want to learn about the essence of webpages, and how to set up the skeleton for their own projects in HTML.
